Quality, Fairness and Service

Under the ruling of the State Commission the price of American Coal works out $14.80 a ton. American Coal has always cost considerably more at the mines. It comes from the best veins in the State. It is carefully cleaned, and the preparation and grading given it is the best. The growth of our business has depended on the quality of coal, fairness of price and the character of service.

Our regular customers demand better coal than the average grade sold. It is a source of satisfaction to us that in spite of the attendant difficulties we are still able to supply that better grade and it is a source of sincere regret that under the present high costs of both labor and raw material, we are not able to supply the finest grade of coal at a lower price.

DR. LYMAN ABBOTT, NOTED EDITOR, DIES

Famous for Work on the Outlook and as Successor of Beecher

MOLDED PUBLIC THOUGHT

New York, Oct. 23.—Dr. Lyman Abbott, editor, preacher and lawyer, died yesterday in his home here with his four sons and two daughters at his bedside. He was eighty-six years old.

Dr. Abbott had an attack of bronchitis early in the summer at his country home at Cornwall-on-the-Hudson and failed to regain his strength. Two weeks ago he returned to the city, but grew steadily weaker.

Dr. Abbott was interested in every movement, social, political and religious, that affected public thought during more than half a century. He was known chiefly as the editor of the Outlook, which he held until his death, and as the successor of Henry Ward Beecher, pastor of Plymouth Church in Brooklyn.

Private funeral services will be held from the late residence in Lexington avenue tomorrow morning.

A public memorial service will be held on the evening of October 31 in the Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church under the direction of the Rev. Henry Sloane Coffin, pastor.

Dr. Abbott's children are Lawrence P. Abbott, president of the Outlook Publishing Company; Ernest Abbott, secretary of the company; Herbert Abbott, professor of English at Smith College; Dr. Theodore Abbott, a physician of this city; Mrs. Francis Jordan, of Brooklyn, and Miss Beatrice V. Abbott, who lived with her father and a niece in his home in Lexington avenue.

In 1857 Dr. Abbott married Miss Abby Frances Hamlin, daughter of Hannibal Hamlin. She died in 1907 while she and Dr. Abbott were on a trip to Germany, six weeks before the golden anniversary of their wedding.

Dr. Abbott's last public appearance was last May 1, when he occupied the pulpit at the morning service in St. George's Protestant Episcopal Church in Stuyvesant Square. It was in that sermon that he made the following declaration: "I shall get no courage to live from this shadow on the clouds, which is but a faint reflection of this life with its people, the same as those on earth, clothed as we are and filling their days as we fill ours. But from the other vision—the vision of purity and love and of sacrifice—I will get courage to look across the river."

Dr. Abbott was born at Roxbury, Mass., December 18, 1835, and was the third son of the Rev. Jacob Abbott, a Congregational clergyman and author.

Dr. Abbott gave up the editorship of the Illustrated Christian Weekly to become editor of the Christian Union, in which he had been associated with the Rev. Henry Ward Beecher.

The lives of Dr. Abbott and Dr. Beecher ran parallel in many respects. After the death of Dr. Beecher, Dr. Abbott, in 1890, became pastor of Plymouth Church in Brooklyn, and remained there until 1898, when he resigned to take up his later work as editor of the Outlook.

Dr. Abbott and Dr. Beecher were among the first prominent clergymen in the United States to take the position that religion had a vital application to the social and civic problems of the time. He and Dr. Beecher, who were close friends, and during all the colonel's years in public life Dr. Abbott was one of his warmest supporters. He and Dr. Beecher were organized as President, Colonel Roosevelt became an associate editor on the Outlook with Dr. Abbott.

While he was pastor of Plymouth Church that many of Dr. Abbott's opinions brought upon him the charge that he was "heretical." In one sermon he said that evolution was not merely the Darwinian theory of the survival of the fittest, but rather the doctrine of growth applied to life, and that all life proceeds by natural processes from lower to higher forms by forces acting from within. He described himself as a "theistic evolutionist."

In another sermon he originated another quotation which gained wide circulation: "He who denies the brotherhood of man is as much an infidel as he who denies the fatherhood of God."

Dr. Abbott's physique was slight, but the amount of work he was able to do was prodigious. He was interested in an astonishingly large variety of subjects, and took a leading part in scores of movements for civic and social betterment.

In his early youth, after graduation from the University of the City of New York, Dr. Abbott studied law and was admitted to the bar, and afterwards practiced in partnership with his brothers, Benjamin V. and Austin Abbott. Giving up the law for theology, he studied for the ministry of the Congregational Church, with his uncle, C. Abbott, and was ordained at Farmington, Me., in 1860. His first charge was in Terre Haute, Ind., where he remained five years.

As editor of the Christian Union, which was later to be known as the Outlook, his work marked him as a man of great promise and one who saw religion, not too narrowly conventionalized, but overlapping and embracing many of the social and civic problems of the time.

Those who were near him say that extraordinary working power was one of his chief characteristics. Moderation and sanity were the chief notes of his temperament and attitude. He commanded attention by his earnest sincerity and by a gift of clear persuasive statement.

The range of Dr. Abbott's connection with civic enterprises was wide; he had intimate association with betterment work in many fields. He held office in at least a score of organizations for city, State and national, and even international reform, and was actively interested in many others, including societies for child, civil and prison reform, charity organizations, forestry associations and the American Red Cross Society.

Dr. Abbott was known not only to his friends and co-workers but to the public as well, as a rational optimist; one who sees clearly present obstacles and evils, but is confident that the creative forces in society are making for the freedom and happiness of man, and must prevail.

Before starting on what might be called his ministerial career, he, in collaboration with his brother, wrote two novels: "Cone-en" "Comera" and "Matthew Caraby."

His most important volumes are: "The Best of Emancipation in the United States," "Old Testament Shadows of New Testament Truths," "A Layman's Story," "Dictionary of Religious Knowledge," "A Study in Human Nature," "The Evolution of Evolutionism," "The Evolution of Christianity," "Social Problems," and "Problems of Life."

FORDNEY PREDICTS BOOM FROM TARIFF

Co-Author of New Law Points to Flexible Feature of Measure

SEES ADEQUATE PROTECTION

Chicago, Oct. 23.—Prosperity is assured by the new tariff law, Congressman Joseph W. Fordney, of Michigan, one of the authors of the Fordney-McCumber tariff law, declared today before the Illinois Manufacturers' Association. The emergency tariff, which preceded the permanent law, "marked a very decided turn in business in general toward prosperity," he asserted.

"More study and effort was given in the framing of the new law than was given to any previous tariff legislation," said Mr. Fordney. "The flexible features of the new law mark an epoch in tariff-making. Upon satisfactory showing that rates in the new law are too high or too low, the means for impartial investigation and correction by executive order are provided. The new law is based on the sound policy of protection and its enactment clears the way to the widest avenue of prosperity."

A year and a half ago, the speaker said, record-breaking importations of farm products and the many bank failures in the Northwest were affecting adversely the country's business in general. The emergency tariff law, he said, acted as a stop gap.

"With the new law affording a just measure of protection, not only to the farm but to the factory as well," he continued, "increased prosperity is assured."

Under the emergency act, he said, the duty on wool in an average suit of clothes was only ninety-two cents and that in an all-wool overcoat $1.71, while the duty on wool in the new law is slightly less.

"Any merchant who will state to the public," Mr. Fordney declared, "that he is compelled to advance the price of his goods because of the increased duty provided in the new act, is untruthful."

The speaker said the average ad valorem rates under the McKinley tariff law were 23 per cent; in the Wilson bill 23 per cent; in the Dingley bill 20 per cent; in the Payne bill 18 1/2 per cent; in the Underwood bill 8 1/2 per cent, while under the new law the average is slightly less than that of the Payne bill.

Free imports under the Payne bill were about 48 per cent of total imports, he said, 48 per cent under the Underwood act and about the same under the new law as under the Payne bill and the "average ad valorem rates, both dutiable and free, are lower under the new law than under any Republican tariff law written."

Furniture for Every Home at Most Satisfying Values

The good times the country is enjoying are reflected in the savings on every Suite and Piece of Furniture on our sales floors. The year to date marks the greatest volume of business in our history, and customers benefit accordingly, for the more we sell, the more our customers save. Of greater importance is the fact that Furniture prices are at their lowest ebb in years. But the turn in the tide has come, for prices have again started upward.

Happy and productive are the evenings spent with Furniture and Furnishings that create an atmosphere of peace and ease. It is not always the price one pays for Furniture, however. Chiefly, it is a knowledge of what the room needs and how to blend Furniture and Furnishings to attain the best effect. The illustration presents an example of our efficiency in this important particular. A delightful Suite of Furniture, rich in Old English influences, illumined with a setting that helps to make the interior both charming and hospitable.
